At Segal Family Foundation, we believe that local solutions are the best solutions. We believe that development should be led by local visionaries and power shifted into the hands of communities. We believe that stellar individuals leading exemplary organizations are best placed to devise contextual and sustainable solutions to local challenges. They are not, however, the focus of many donors’ funding. We created the African Visionary Fellowship to disrupt this paradigm.

Beginning in 2017 with an inaugural cohort of 25 fellows from across eight countries, AVF offers capacity building designed for and by local visionaries themselves. Fellows receive mentorship, exposure, and the support of a community of like-minded changemakers. The Fellowship drives more resources to local visionaries and their organizations—their work will accelerate, and their impact will grow.
SOLOMON KING BENGE

Solomon King Benge is passionate about education, design, business, and technology. In 2011, he founded Fundi Bots, a non-profit that aims to promote better science education experiences, improved career prospects, and real-world technological advancement in African high schools and local communities through training and experimentation in robotics using a project-based and skills-oriented learning methodology.

He started his first business at 20 and currently has two businesses in his portfolio, both of which are key players in the Ugandan technology and design industry. Solomon’s work has been covered by Wired Magazine (UK), BBC, CNN, and Voice of America.

JADE MAINA

Jade Maina’s mother taught her that women could do anything to which they set their minds. Yet as a student at University of Nairobi, she realized that other women lacked autonomy and the services to support their choices. She saw female students enter exploitative, violent relationships and struggle to protect themselves from unwanted pregnancies and STIs.

Jade joined Trust for Indigenous Culture and Health (TICAH) in 2006, working to promote health, equitable relationships, and community action. Through empowerment programs such as “Our Bodies, Our Choices,” TICAH encourages more honest, healthy, and informed approaches to sexual life for all ages where rights and choices are respected.
ANGE MUYUBIRA

Ange Muyubira is a social entrepreneur with the goal of improving the lives of those with less opportunity, especially those from her home country of Burundi. Pursuing her passion for beauty and fashion, she served as an account manager for 10 years in London for many high-end beauty houses including Chanel, Dior, Carolina Herrera, and Prada. Back in Burundi, she organized fashion shows, film and theater events, and ad campaigns, as well as private and national events such as Burundi tourism exhibitions in Western countries.

Ange founded Kaz’O’zah Art to bolster Burundian artisans by providing training and facilitating their access to both national and international markets. Kaz’O’zah provides employment opportunities and allows artisans to make a living from their trade.

WILLIE MPASUKA

Willie Mpasuka comes from a humble background: one of nine children growing up in a slum. This affected his academic performance, and he was deemed a slow learner. Through support of relatives and community, Willie became the only child who graduated from college. He then committed his life to helping slow learners complete school with excellence.

In 2009, he co-founded Rays of Hope Ministries, an organization working to improve the quality of education, supplement primary education with creative and remedial educational programs, offer secondary school opportunities, and equip youth with vocational skills as a foundation for productive lives. Rays of Hope currently serves 66,000 children in Malawi; the model is being replicated in other districts due to its success.
